Ice cream flavour of New Zealand

Hokey pokey is a flavour of ice cream in New Zealand consisting of plain vanilla 3 , £ ice cream with small, solid lumps of honeycomb toffee.

Hokey pokey is the New Zealand term for honeycomb toffee.[2][3][4][5]

The 3 , £ original recipe until around 1980 consisted of solid toffee, but in a marketing change, Tip Top decided to use small 3 , £ balls of honeycomb toffee instead.

It is the second-most popular ice cream flavour behind vanilla in New Zealand,[6] and is a 3 , £ frequently cited example of Kiwiana.[7] It is also exported to Japan, Australia, and the Pacific Islands.[8]

Origins and etymology [ edit 3 , £ ]

The term hokey pokey has been used in reference to honeycomb toffee in New Zealand since the late 19th century. 3 , £ The origin of this term, in reference to honeycomb specifically, is not known with certainty, and it is not until 3 , £ the mid-20th century that hokey pokey ice cream was created.[citation

Coincidentally, "hokey pokey" was a slang term for ice cream 3 , £ in general in the 19th and early 20th centuries in several areas including New York City[9] and parts of 3 , £ Great Britain specifically for the ice cream sold by street vendors or "hokey pokey men". The vendors, said to 3 , £ be mostly of Italian descent, supposedly used a sales pitch or song involving the phrase "hokey pokey", for which several 3 , £ origins have been suggested. One such song in use in 1930s Liverpool was "Hokey pok ey penny a lump, that's the 3 , £ stuff to make ye jump";[10]

The term hokey pokey likely has multiple origins. One of these is the expression "hocus-pocus", which 3 , £ is possibly the source of the name hokey pokey in New Zealand. As a general name for ice cream outside 3 , £ New Zealand, it may be a corruption of one of several Italian phrases. According to "The Encyclopedia of Food" (published 3 , £ 1923, New York) hokey pokey (in the U.S.) is "a term applied to mixed colors and flavors of ice cream 3 , £ in cake form"
